

QUESTION BANK

UNIT_1

Introduction to Human resource management

1. Define HRM?

Human resource management is an organizational function that deals with issues related to people such as compensation, hiring, performance management, organizational development, safety, wellness, benefits, employee motivation, communication, administration, and training.

Effective HRMS triggers employees to contribute more efficiently and hence increases productivity of the overall company, helping the team to accomplish the organization's short-term as well as long-term goals and objectives.

2. Explain the nature of HRM?

- HRM involves management functions like planning, organizing, directing and controlling.
- It involves procurement, development, maintenance and management of human resource.
- It helps to achieve individual, organizational and social objectives.
- HRM is a mighty disciplinary subject. It includes the study of management psychology communication, economics and sociology.
- It involves team spirit and team work.

3. Explain the objectives of HRM?

The objectives of HRM can be broken down into four broad categories:

Societal objectives: Measures put into place that responds to the ethical and social needs or challenges of the company and its employees. This includes legal issues such as equal opportunity and equal pay for equal work.

Organizational objectives: Actions taken that help to ensure the efficiency of the organization. This includes providing training, hiring the right number of employees for a given task or maintaining high employee retention rates.

Functional objectives: Guidelines used to keep HR functioning properly within the organization as a whole. This includes making sure that all of HR's resources are being allocated to their full potential.

Personal objectives: Resources used to support the personal goals of each employee. This includes offering the opportunity for education or career development as well as maintaining employee satisfaction.

4. Explain the Managerial functions of HRM?

Managerial Function:

These functions help an HR manager maintain a proper balance within the organization, which helps with its smooth operation.

This function type can be divided into four major parts.

1. Planning

A manager's job is to plan and manage subordinates who can efficiently and effortlessly implement the plan.

- Determination of personnel programs
- Planning job requirements
- Contributing to organizational goals
- Anticipating vacancies
- Determining the recruitment sources

2. Organizing

- After planning, this is an essential task that the HR managers need to handle.
- Responsibility for assigning various functions to different individuals
- Responsibility for delegation of authority, keeping in mind the task assigned
- Responsibility for the coordination of activities of different individuals

3. Directing the HRM to encourage people to work towards the achievement of goals willingly. This is a skill that one can develop after receiving proper training.

- Career planning
- Ensuring employee welfare
- Salary management
- Identifying the needs of employees

4. Controlling

An essential step in ensuring standards and correcting any deviations that may have occurred. In addition, this process helps the HRM to evaluate and control the performance of the personnel department. This step includes performance appraisal, personal audit, and examination of personal records.

5. Describe various importance of HRM?

Objective :-

HRM helps a company to achieve its objective from time to time by creating a positive attitude among workers. Reducing wastage and making maximum use of resources etc.

Facilitates professional growth :-

Due to proper HR policies employees are trained well and this makes them ready for future promotions. Their talent can be utilized not only in the company in which they are currently working but also in other companies which the employees may join in the future.

Better relations between union and management :-

Healthy HRM practices can help the organization to maintain co-ordinal relationship with the unions.

Helps an individual to work in a team/group :-

Effective HR practices teach individuals team work and adjustment. The individuals are now very comfortable while working in team thus team work improves.

Identifies person for the future :-

employees are constantly trained, they are ready to meet the job requirements. The company is also able to identify potential employees who can be promoted in the future for the top level jobs.

Allocating the jobs to the right person :-

If proper recruitment and selection methods are followed, the company will be able to select the right people for the right job.

Improves the economy :

Effective HR practices lead to higher profits and better performance by companies due to this the company achieves a chance to enter into new business and start new ventured thus industrial development increases and the economy improves.

6. Difference between personal management and Functional management system?

BASIS FOR COMPARISON	PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT	HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT
Meaning	The aspect of management that is concerned with the work force and their relationship with the entity is known as Personnel Management.	The branch of management that focuses on the most effective use of the manpower of an entity, to achieve the organizational goals is known as Human Resource Management.
Approach	Traditional	Modern
Treatment of manpower	Machines or Tools	Asset
Type of function	Routine function	Strategic function
Basis of Pay	Job Evaluation	Performance Evaluation
Management Role	Transactional	Transformational
Communication	Indirect	Direct
Labor Management	Collective Bargaining Contracts	Individual Contracts
Initiatives	Piecemeal	Integrated
Management Actions	Procedure	Business needs
Decision Making	Slow	Fast

BASIS FOR COMPARISON	PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT	HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT
Job Design	Division of Labor	Groups/Teams

7. Discuss various scope of HRM?

1. Human resources planning :-

Human resource planning or Human Resource Planning refers to a process by which the company to identify the number of jobs vacant, whether the company has excess staff or shortage of staff and to deal with this excess or shortage.

Job analysis design :-

Job analysis gives a detailed explanation about each and every job in the company.

Recruitment and selection :-

Based on information collected from job analysis the company prepares advertisements and publishes them in the newspapers. This is recruitment. A number of applications are received after the advertisement is published, interviews are conducted and the right employee is selected thus recruitment and selection are yet another important area of Human Resource Management.

Orientation and induction :-

Once the employees have been selected an induction or orientation program is conducted. The employees are informed about the background of the company, explain about the organizational culture and values and work ethics and introduce to the other employees.

Training and development :-

Every employee goes under training program which helps him to put up a better performance on the job. Training program is also conducted for existing staff that have a lot of experience. This is called refresher training. Training and development is one area where the company spends a huge amount.

Performance appraisal :-

performance appraisal is conducted that is the Human Resource department checks the performance of the employee. Based on these appraisal future promotions, incentives, increments in salary are decided.

Compensation planning and remuneration :-

There are various rules regarding compensation and other benefits. It is the job of the Human Resource department to look into remuneration and compensation planning.

Motivation, welfare, health and safety :-

Motivation becomes important to sustain the number of employees in the company. It is the job of the Human Resource department to look into the different methods of motivation. Apart from this certain health and safety regulations have to be followed for the benefits of the employees. This is also handled by the HR department.

Industrial relations :-

Another important area of Human Resource Management is maintaining co-ordinal relations with the union members. This will help the organization to prevent strikes lockouts and ensure smooth working in the company.

8. Explain the operative function of HRM?

1. Employment

This step involves finding candidates who can turn into employees and is a perfect fit for the organization. It also involves recruiting someone with a proper skill set and understanding the number of persons needed to fulfill the organization's goal.

2. Compensation

this is a step involved with determining the remuneration amount for an employee in exchange for their contribution to the organizational goals. As an aspiring HR manager, it is essential to remember that the remuneration can be monetary or non-monetary rewards.

- Requirement of the job
- Basic needs
- Legal provision
- Organization's capacity to pay

3. Development

- The HR manager is responsible for training the new employees properly. They have to teach each employee properly to ensure their skill sets are utilized appropriately.
- To ensure the growth of the employees, HR managers are required to create proper training programs to help solve the purpose.

4. Working conditions and Welfare

An HR manager's job is to ensure appropriate workplace conditions. They need to ensure that the workspace is safe and healthy for employees. As an HR manager, one has to provide all the services related to the employees' physical, mental, and social welfare.

- Cafeteria
- Restrooms
- Group insurance
- Education for children of employees
- Counseling
- Recreational activities

5. Motivation

Keeping employees motivated is among the key functions of the human resource department.

6. Personal Record

An employee's journey is documented right from the day they joined. It is the HRM department's responsibility to maintain the personnel records. The records contain information on their appointment, training, appraisal, promotion, transfer, achievement, and other things related to the organization.

UNIT 2

Human Resource Planning

1) Define Human Resource Planning?

Human resource planning (HRP) is the continuous process of systematic planning to achieve optimum use of an organization's most valuable asset—quality employees. Human resources planning ensures the best fit between employees and jobs while avoiding manpower shortages or surpluses.

2) What are the features of human resource planning?

A successful human resource planning strategy may look different from organization to organization

It is future oriented: Human Resource Planning is forward-looking. It involves forecasting the manpower needs for a future period so that adequate and timely provisions may be made to meet the needs.

It is a continuous process: Human Resource Planning is a continuous process because the demand and supply of Human Resource keeps fluctuating throughout the year.

Integral part of Corporate Planning: Manpower planning is an integral part of corporate planning because without a corporate plan there can be no manpower planning.

Optimum utilization of resources: The basic purpose of Human Resource Planning is to make optimum utilization of organisation's current and future human resources.

Both Qualitative and Quantitative aspect:

human Resource Management, 'Quantitative' meaning the right number of people and 'Qualitative' implying the right quality of manpower required in the organisation.

Long term and Short term: Human Resource Planning is both Long-term and short-term in nature. Human Resource Planning keeps long-term goals and short-term goals in view while predicting and forecasting the demand and supply of Human Resource.

Involves study of manpower requirement: Human Resource Planning involves the study of manpower availability and the manpower requirement in the organisation.

3) What are the objectives of Human resource planning?

Achieve Goal: Human Resource Planning helps in achieving individual, Organizational & National goals. Human resource planning is linked with career planning, it can able to achieve individual goal while achieving organisational and national goal.

Estimates future organizational structure and Manpower Requirements: Human Resource Planning is related with number of Personnel required for the future, job-family, age distribution of employees, qualification & desired experience, salary range etc and thereby determines future organisation structure.

Human Resource Audit: Human resource planning process is comprised of estimating the future needs and determining the present supply of Manpower Resources. Manpower supply analysis is done through skills inventory. This helps in preventing over staffing as well as under-staffing.

Job Analysis: The process of studying and collecting information relating to operations and responsibilities of a specific job is called Job analysis. Job analysis is comprised of job description and job specification.

4) Explain the importance of Human resource planning?

- It gives the company the right kind of workforce at the right time frame and in right figures.
- In striking a balance between demand-for and supply-of resources, HRP helps in the optimum usage of resources and also in reducing the labor cost.
- Cautiously forecasting the future helps to supervise manpower in a better way, thus pitfalls can be avoided.
- It helps the organization to develop a succession plan for all its employees. In this way, it creates a way for internal promotions.

- It compels the organization to evaluate the weaknesses and strengths of personnel thereby making the management to take remedial measures.
- The organization as a whole is benefited when it comes to increase in productivity, profit, skills, etc., thus giving an edge over its competitors.

5) Explain the types of human resource planning?

strategic and operational human resource planning is essential for organizations to ensure that they have the necessary personnel to meet their business objectives.

Strategic planning helps organizations identify and address long-term human resources issues, such as succession planning, talent development and management, and workforce diversity.

Operational planning, on the other hand, helps organizations to manage day-to-day staffing requirements and ensure that they have the right number of employees with the necessary skills and competencies to meet operational demands.

UNIT 3

JOB ANALYSIS, RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION

1.What is Recruitment and Selection?

Recruitment is the process of searching for prospective employees and stimulating them to apply for jobs in the organisation.

Selection is the process in which candidates for employment are divided into two classes-those who are to be offered employment and those who are not.

2. Explain the methods of recruitment

There are three main methods of recruitment: direct, indirect, and third-party.

✓ Direct Recruitment

The direct method of recruitment eliminates the need for middlemen, such as professors or recruiters. Direct recruitment is the most commonly used on-campus recruitment. Some methods of direct recruitment include job fairs and institutional visits.

✓ Indirect recruitment

Indirect recruitment involves informing the potential candidate about the job vacancy through different channels of advertisement.

✓ Third-party recruitment

Third-party recruitment methods involve hiring a recruiter who will contact potential candidates on behalf of the organisation.

✓ Using social media can be a great way to attract new talent.

✓ Video Interviewing

✓ Traditional advertising copywriting brief

✓ Content marketing brief

✓ Search engine optimisation

✓ Internships and apprenticeships

3)what are the advantages of selection process?

- It is cost-effective and reduces time and effort.
- It helps avoid any biasing while recruiting the right candidate.
- It eliminates candidates that lack knowledge, ability, and proficiency.

- It provides a guideline to evaluate candidates through strict verification and reference-checking.

4) Explain selection process.

Recruitment:

Once a requirement is posted, a company may receive hundreds of thousands of applications. the preliminary interview is conducted to weed out all candidates who do not meet the essential eligibility criteria – educational qualifications, required skill sets, proven certifications, and experience.

Applications

Candidates pass the preliminary interview, organizations must aim to standardize the application process. candidates must fill out a standard application form that collects bio-data, qualification, experience, background, and educational information.

Screening Applications

This stage includes shortlisting potential candidates from the pool of applicants who applied.

Preliminary Tests

Preliminary tests are an essential part of the job selection process. They assess the aptitude, IQ, emotional intelligence, proficiency, and personality of candidates. While some organizations hold these tests remotely, many prefer to arrange a test venue generally within organizational premises.

Employment Interview

The employment interview itself may be divided into several rounds, including group discussions and other activities. In-person interviews allow employers to judge the candidate's calibre, personality, teamwork, and leadership skills.

Checking References

Although in-person interviews provide a fair idea about the candidate, contacting references allows employers to verify their understanding.

Medical Examination

Modern companies are viewing medical fitness (both mental and physical) as a cost function.

Final Selection

Candidates who have successfully qualified through all rounds of the recruitment and selection in HRM receive an offer/appointment letter from the organization. the appointment letter typically includes all such details, including salary and company policies.

5. Explain the source of Recruitment?

There are generally recognised two sources of recruitment, which are internal and external sources.

Internal Sources

Internal sources of recruitment refers to the recruitment of employees who are already a part of the existing payroll of the organisation. The vacancy for the position can be informed to the employee through internal communication.

1. Promotion:
2. Transfer:
3. Employee Referrals:
4. Former employees:

External Sources

External sources of recruitment seek to employ candidates that have not been recruited anytime before in the organisation.

Introduction of fresh talent among the workforce leads to growth and development of the business.

Following are the some of the external sources of recruitment:

1. Advertisement
2. Employment Exchanges
3. Employment portals
4. Educational Institutions
5. Recommendation

6) What are the features of Placement?

- Improves the morale of the employee
- Reduces employee turnover
- Decreases accident rates
- Enhances labour productivity
- Clarifies expectation.

7) What are the uses of job analysis?

Job Analysis plays an important role in recruitment and selection, job evaluation, job designing, deciding compensation and benefits packages, performance appraisal, analyzing training and development needs, assessing the worth of a job and increasing personnel as well as organizational productivity.

8) What are the process of job analysis?

- Defining the objectives
- Preparing the job Analysis
- Performing the Job Analysis
- Designing Job Descriptions and Job Specifications
- Control Job Descriptions and Job Specifications

UNIT 4

INDUCTION AND TRAINING

1) what are the characteristics of induction?

- (i) Encouraging employees to ask questions.
- (ii) Including information on both technical and social aspects of the job.
- (iii) Making the new employee's manager responsible for the orientation.
- (iv) Avoiding embarrassment to the new members.
- (v) Arranging formal and informal interaction with managers and peers.
- (vi) Providing relocation assistance such as house hunting, information about the local society, and etc.
- (vii) Giving information about the company's products, services and customers.
- (viii) Adequately with the culture of the organization such as how work is done, what matters in the organization, which work-related behaviours are acceptable or unacceptable and etc.

2. Explain the objectives of induction

- Provide essential information about the organization to new employees
- To develop employee confidence to become productive employees
- Provide a better understanding of the organization's vision, mission, functions, and other organizational strategies.
- To provide facilities to the employees.
- To introduce new employees to their managers, team leaders, and subordinates.
- To maintain a good relationship with the existing employees.

3. what is the purpose of induction program?

- Workplace culture
- Compliance
- Retention
- Productivity
- Save time and money
- Company reputation

4) Define 'training'. Explain the various methods of training?

Training is a critical strategic tool usually introduced as teaching specific skills and conducts.

Methods of training

- I. On the job training and
- II. Off the job training

On the job training:

This is the most common method of training in which a trainee is placed on a specific job and taught the skills and knowledge necessary to perform it

- Job rotation
- Coaching
- Job instruction
- Committee assignments
- Internship training

Off the job training:

The methods of training which are adopted for the development of employees away from the field of the job are known as off the job methods

- Case study method
- Incident method
- Role play
- In-basket method
- Business games
- Grid training
- Lectures
- Conferences

5) Describe the benefits of training.

- Improves morale of employees
- Less Supervisions
- Fewer accident
- Chances of promotion
- Increased productivity
- Reduce employee turnover
- Build a competitive advantage
- Prevent and address skills gaps

6) Discuss the needs for training?

(i) Higher Productivity:

It is essential to increase productivity and reduce cost of production for meeting competition in the market.

(ii) Quality Improvement:

To satisfy the customers, quality of products must be continuously improved through training of workers.

(iii) Reduction of Learning Time:

Systematic training through trained instructors is essential to reduce the training period.

(iv) Industrial Safety:

Trained workers can handle the machines safely. They also know the use of various safety devices in the factory. Thus, they are less prone to industrial accidents.

(iv) Reduction of Turnover and Absenteeism:

Training creates a feeling of confidence in the minds of the workers. It gives them a security at the workplace. As a result, labour turnover and absenteeism rates are reduced.

(vi) Technology Update:

training should be treated as a continuous process to update the employees in the new methods and procedures.

(vii) Effective Management

It helps in reducing the costs of supervision, wastages and industrial accidents. It also helps increase productivity and quality which are the cherished goals of any modern organization.

UNIT 5

PERFORMANCE APPRAISAL, PROMOTIONS AND TRANSFER

1. Define performance appraises?

A performance appraisal is a systematic and periodic process of measuring an individual's work performance against the established requirements of the job. It's a subjective evaluation of the employee's strengths and weaknesses, relative worth to the organization, and future development potential.

2)What are the objectives of performance appraisal?

1. To maintain records in order to determine compensation packages, wage structure, salaries raises, etc.
2. To identify the strengths and weaknesses of employees to place right men on right job.
3. To maintain and assess the potential in a person for growth and development.
4. To provide a feedback to employees regarding their performance and related status.
5. It serves as a basis for influencing working habits of the employees.
6. To review and retain the promotional and other training programmes

3)Explain the types of promotions?

1. Horizontal promotion:

When an employee is shifted in the same category, it is called 'horizontal promotion'. A junior clerk promoted to senior clerk is such an example.

2. Vertical Promotion:

This is the kind of promotion when an employee is promoted from a lower category to lower category involving increase in salary, status, authority and responsibility. Generally, promotion means 'vertical promotion'.

3. Dry Promotion:

When promotion is made without increase in salary, it is called 'dry promotion'. For example, a lower level manager is promoted to senior level manager without increase in salary or pay.

4) Explain the purpose of promotions?

1. To recognize an employee's skill and knowledge and utilize it to improve the organisational effectiveness.
2. To reward and motivate employees to higher productivity.
3. To develop competitive spirit and inculcate the zeal in the employees to acquire skill, knowledge etc.
4. To promote employees satisfaction and boost their morale.
5. To build loyalty among the employees toward organisation.
6. To promote good human relations.
7. To retain skilled and talented people.
8. To attract trained, competent and hard working people.

5) Define transfer and promotion?

- Promotion refers to the upward movement of an employee from one job to another higher one, with increase in salary, status and responsibilities. Promotion may be temporary or permanent, depending upon the needs of the organisation.
- A transfer is a horizontal or lateral movement of an employee from one job, section, department, shift, plant or position to another at the same or another place where his salary, status and responsibility are the same.

6) List out the types of transfers

- Production transfer
- Remedial transfer
- Replacement transfer
- Versatility transfer
- Shift transfer
- Penalty transfer

